THE TRUTH

Edwin N. Hurley says: "If state and national government are to determine what is a fair street railway wage scale, then they should also assume the responsibility of determining and establishing what is an adequate street railway fare."

THE PRICE IS STILL THE SAME

Insurance rates have not been raised—in fact, have been reduced in many cities since other costs have been mounting higher and higher. This fact is brought out by T. H. Williams of Pacific States Fire Insurance company of Portland, Ore.

Mr. Williams says:

"Insurance companies, life, fire, accident, automobile or casualty, have not increased their rates since the world war started. Clerk hire, paper, printing and all supplies used in the manufacture of indemnity have more than doubled during the war period and the insurance companies have not asked the public to pay this additional expense. Fire insurance companies have reduced their rates materially during the last three years and have carried this additional burden without calling upon the public for aid."

"In 1914 the federal taxes on insurance premiums were 1 per cent; they are now twelve times that, plus an excess profit tax, plus a war profit tax, plus a capital stock tax, and in addition to all these 1 per cent on the gross premiums income without any deductions whatever for cancellations; cancellations with all companies average 25 per cent. The net underwriting profit in the U. S. last year was 1.89 per cent, a small margin upon which to work. Insurance companies are to be commended for their loyalty in paying the increased taxation and cost of doing business, without increasing the cost of indemnity to the public."
